This publication consists of a series of formal lectures delivered at Denbies Vineyard in 2010. They feature the principles of the treatment of the young infant and child from the classical perspective presented by Mervyn Waldman and Chris Batten. The lectures are illustrated with slides and some treatment footage to demonstrate this unique osteopathic approach. The final disc contains additional treatments of the child patient and clearly shows some of the challenges and considerations required when working with this patient group. The Osteopathic Technique of T.E Hall (I DVD)

Reformatted from the 1996 video
Narrated by Christopher Campbell

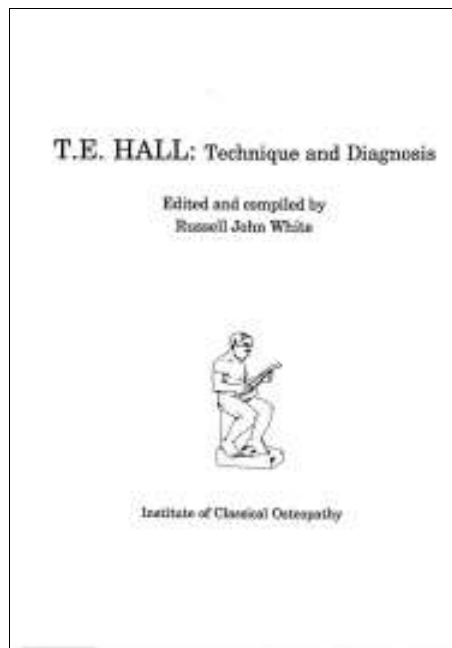

T.E. Hall was regarded by his contemporaries as being one of the most accomplished osteopathic technicians of his time. This archive footage helps demonstrate some of the important diagnostic and treatment techniques that he employed in his teaching and practicing life.

For Hall the art of Osteopathy demanded a thorough knowledge of the physiological movements of the spine, a high degree of diagnostic and palpatory skills and the technical ability to deal with the underlying conditions, this film clearly demonstrates these points. Another lifelong friend and colleague was John Wernham who was a co-founder of the Institute. Their friendship extended to the production of this footage and they both appear together in this film.

This film is shot in black & white.

...The basic principle of osteopathy has been described in many different ways but may simply be stated as the belief that the functioning and health of the body depend on its structural, mechanical and postural state. If we truly accept this idea, we are no longer concerned with the problem of whether a particular condition or patient should be treated osteopathically as every case can be treated in accordance with this principle.....

.....It is said that the final test of any therapy is at the bedside of the acutely ill patient. The treatment of acute disease in the infant or child adds an element of responsibility and skill over and above that required for the adult. Palpatory and diagnostic skills are often stretched to their limit.....However, all too often in the critical case one must rely, when at the bedside, almost entirely on detecting arrhythmicity and points of soft and hard tissue resistance.
